

I believe that I didn't obtain speedup when increasing the amount of threads because my code has a lot of overhead cost, potentially from using class level locking rather than object level locking. Due to my implementation there was more code "locked" than necessary so the other threads waited longer.